Prior Legislation

A companion case to subdivide the property through the preliminary plat process is pending before the Development Review Committee. The DRC has final authority in approving preliminary plats when no waivers or modifications from code requirements, including public improvements, are proposed. None are proposed and therefore DRC can approve the preliminary plat if the rezoning before City Council is approved. After preliminary plat approval occurs, the developer will be required to construct required public improvements and submit final plats for each phase of the subdivision. The final plats will come to Council for approval at that time.
