6/27/2024	Jackie	Ahumada	Homeowner	Kansas City	The historic drop in permitting activity should clearly prove the City Council has headed down the wrong path with the 2021 energy code. I support Ordinance 240434 to help bring builders back to Kansas City, MO. I've seen firsthand how builders have moved outside the city limits to neighboring communities since the energy code was adopted.

The lack of permits and new homes being built in KCMO has significantly affected hundreds of businesses in the entire metro area, and thousands of employees and their families. Please give some relief and pass the proposed ordinance immediately. Even the most basic home takes more than 6 months to build, most of the affected will not see relief until mid 2025!

This ordinance will help expedite issuing of permits for builders. We sell new homes in Kansas City and we have seen buyers building in other municipalities outside of KC because of the time frame it adds for getting permits and the cost increases of building with these new codes. KC has already lost revenue from these new codes. Also the cost of these new codes to the new homeowner is overwhelming to first time home buyers or buyers in the low to middle income range. We are hurting instead of helping these people reach home ownership. Thank you for considering this ordinance.

My family depends on new home construction in and around Kansas City. Please help us make a more streamlined path for permitting new single family homes.

I work in a subdivision that has been very active in the past. To date we still have customer that are wanting to build. Our area is convenient to major highways for persons who work in the KC area. By the codes that KC is instituting we have come to a stop. Not only are we as agents out of work, but also construction works, decorators, builders, lenders, inspection & appraisal companies. This list goes on and on. Something needs to happen! Stop postponing meeting and get this situation settled!

Please restore the housing market!!!

As the biggest teams in KC Metro we are continuously hearing from our builders regarding land to develop or current lots to buy that they will not do it in a Kansas City address. It's obvious when the biggest builder in the country comes to town and they avoid a KC Address on all of their land purchases. Hopefully someone can see the damage being done to affordability.

During this housing crisis where there is clearly a shortage of housing in our city, please do the right thing for those that wish to build housing so that our citizens can realize the American Dream and path to wealth-building through homeownership. When the experts, homebuilders - though their small businesses that choose to invest in our city, the least that we can do is to listen to them. We need them more than they need us. They employ our people and add to economy and our limited inventory. They also have options and can choose to do business in another municipality that is more welcoming and easier to work with. Enough is enough.

While I dont live in KC, my company is instrumental in providing energy to new and existing homes. Builders have homeowners who want to live in KC for a reason and should not be delayed by the permitting process. Homes are expensive enough without adding cumbersome codes and processes that have been adopted by the City.

From what I am hearing through the grapevine at work and through friends in the building arena. The New KC codes are killing permits because of the costs associated with them, making houses unaffordable for new home buyers. The new codes in addition to interest rates are not good for the building industry.
 Pass the ordinance QUICKLY! Don't delay any longer. Then concurrently engineer an entirely new process that's robust enough to handle future changes with ease.

KC has allowed builders to see the simplicity of building elsewhere.

I'm requesting your support to help pass Ordinance 240434.

The process is so hard and cumbersome. The lack of communication from the plan reviewers and the architects makes it so frustrating to do business in the city. Better building methods are encouraged with our company however if you ask anyone the city of kcmo is the most difficult to obtain a permit. We have a plan that had 356 pages we had to submit for a new home that is still in review. Is this really the best use of anyone's time not to mention copies of blueprints? Keep it simple kcmo

7/3/2024	Zebulin	Siebert	Builder	Kansas City

Kansas City native. Wanting to move back to the KC area after serving in the marines

With the changes made in 2023, we would not consider building within the KCMO limits. Any potential clients coming to us with interest in KCMO, we would either try to get them in a different jurisdiction or have to decline building for them.

I am asking for your help to pass Ordinance 240434. I work with an amazing builder, Hoffmann Custom Homes who has multiple communities in the Northland and this issue has caused significant challenges to his business, as well as mine. Prospective Buyers are waiting on the City to get this figured out so that they can build/purchase a new home and sell their current one. Along with it has added to the challenge of severely effective our inventory overall in the market. Please help by getting this settled. Thank you!
